

Drash on Parashat Ha'azinu

Parashat Ha'azinu is found near the end of the fifth Book of the Torah, Devahreem (Deuteronomy in English). The Jewish name of the book means The Words and the English name of the book means Repetition of The Law. In many ways this Book summarizes the preceding four and is understood to contain speeches made by Moses near the end of his time leading Israel through the wilderness.

The name of this parashat is derived from the first Hebrew word which means listen in the form used when addressing more than one person. To provide the customary summation of the entire parashat, I, as usual, quote Wikipedia:

The parashah sets out the Song of Moses – an indictment of the Israelites' sins, a prophecy of their punishment, and a promise of God's ultimate redemption of them.

The summary omits the final eleven verses of the parashat following the song which relate that Moses recited the song to all the people, admonished them to take the words to heart and teach the Torah to their children; then God told Moses to climb Mount Nebo to see the land of Canaan and then die.

This drash is a slight reworking of the drash The LORD had me prepare for the previous parashat (likely His intention, unknown to me, was this was to be presented to the men here assembled). I was struck that about a third of that very short portion foretells how unfaithful the Jewish people are going to be, setting the stage for The Song of Moses. So we will begin to unpack this a bit with a Torah reading from Deuteronomy 31:26-29 (TLV):

<sup>26</sup> "Take this Book of the Law and place it beside the ark of the covenant of the LORD your God. There it will remain as a witness against you. <sup>27</sup> For I know how rebellious and stiff-necked you are. If you have been rebellious against the LORD while I am still alive and with you, how much more will you rebel after I die! <sup>28</sup> Assemble before me all the elders of your tribes and all your officials, so that I can speak these words in their hearing and call the heavens and the earth to testify against them. <sup>29</sup> For I know that after my death you are sure to become utterly corrupt and to turn from the way I have commanded you. In days to come, disaster will fall on you because you will do evil in the sight of the LORD and arouse his anger by what your hands have made."

Last week's parashat also identifies a fourth witness against Israel: this Song of Moses, which verse 21 promises will not be forgotten by future generations.

Moses' dressing down of Israel is a paraphrasing of what The LORD had just said to him and Joshua at the Tent of Meeting. I wonder how Joshua felt about being commissioned to lead a nation with such a dismal expectation of the outcome? Well, be strong and courageous, nevertheless, because God is with you at least.

So after Joshua went to be with his fathers, it came as no surprise that Israel as a nation brought calamity after calamity upon itself. The LORD raised up one unlikely leader after another to lead Israel out of the fine messes it kept getting itself into after relapsing into wicked ways. One of these leaders was a woman, Deborah, who was accepted by Israel both as its highest judge and even as a military leader (or at least as a consultant to the military leaders), and she demonstrated perhaps the highest level of commitment to The LORD of all the judges, possibly excepting Samuel. The Scriptures do not state inarguably that it is, from The LORD's point of view, a wrong thing for men to be led by a woman (there's much argument about that). Certainly, however, the men in the Scriptures (and most women, too) had concluded such governance cannot ever be God's best. Nonetheless, that generation of Israelites accepted Deborah's leadership, and most had no quarrel with the deliverance from geopolitical oppression that was obtained thereby.

After the time of the judges, royalty took over, but the see-saw of national spiritual fealty continued just the same. By the time of Josiah, Israel's devotion to The LORD had reached another nadir.

Josiah became king in Jerusalem when he was eight. Eight years later, now 16, he began to seek the God of his father David. Four years later, now 20, he began to purge his kingdom of idolatry. Six years later, now 26, he commissioned refurbishing the dilapidated Temple. This Haftorah reading, II Chronicles 34:14-33, tells what came about.

<sup>14</sup> While they were bringing out the silver that had been brought into the House of ADONAI, Hilkiyah the kohen found a Torah scroll of ADONAI given by Moses. <sup>15</sup> Hilkiyah responded by telling Shaphan the scribe, "I have found a scroll of the Torah in the House of ADONAI." Hilkiyah gave the scroll to Shaphan.

<sup>16</sup> Then Shaphan brought the scroll to the king and moreover returned a report to the king, saying, "Your servants are doing everything that was committed to them. <sup>17</sup> They have melted down the silver that was found in the House of Adonai and handed it over to the overseers and into the hand of the workmen." <sup>18</sup> Shaphan the scribe also said to the king, "Hilkiyah the kohen has given me a scroll." Shaphan read from it in the presence of the king.

<sup>19</sup> When the king heard the words of the Torah, he tore his clothes.

<sup>20</sup> The king commanded Hilkiah, Ahikam son of Shaphan, Abdon son of Micah, Shaphan the scribe, and Asaiah the king's servant, saying,

<sup>21</sup> "Go! Inquire of ADONAI for me and for the remnant in Israel and in Judah, concerning the words of the book that has been found. For great is the wrath of ADONAI that will be poured out upon us—because our fathers did not observe the word of ADONAI to do according to all that is written in this scroll."

<sup>22</sup> So Hilkiah, and those whom the king commanded, went to [Ch]uldah the prophetess, the wife of Shallum son of Tokahath, son of Hasrah, keeper of the wardrobe—now she was living in Jerusalem in the Second Quarter—and spoke to her about this.

<sup>23</sup> She said to them, "Thus says ADONAI, the God of Israel: 'Tell the man who sent you to me, <sup>24</sup> "Thus says ADONAI, 'Behold, I am bringing disaster on this place and on its inhabitants—all the curses that are written in the book that they have read before the king of Judah. <sup>25</sup> For they have forsaken Me and have burned incense to other gods in order to provoke Me with all the works of their hands. Therefore, My wrath will be poured out upon this place and it will not be quenched.'" <sup>26</sup> But to the king of Judah who sent you to inquire of ADONAI, thus you will say to him, "Thus says ADONAI the God of Israel, 'Regarding the words which you have heard, <sup>27</sup> because your heart was tender and you humbled yourself before God when you heard His words against this place and against the inhabitants, and you humbled yourself before Me, tore your clothes, and wept before Me, I have heard you,' says ADONAI. <sup>28</sup> 'Behold, I will gather you to your fathers and you will be buried in your grave in shalom. Your eyes will not see all the evil that I will bring upon this place and upon the inhabitants.'" "

So they brought her word back to the king.

<sup>29</sup> Then the king sent and gathered together all the elders of Judah and Jerusalem. <sup>30</sup> The king went up to the House of ADONAI with all the men of Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the kohanim, the Levites, and all the people from the oldest to the youngest. He read in their hearing all the words of the Book of the Covenant that was found in the House of ADONAI.

<sup>31</sup> Then the king stood in his place and made a covenant before ADONAI—to follow ADONAI and to observe His mitzvot, His regulations and His decrees with all his heart and with all his soul and to obey the words of the covenant written in this book. <sup>32</sup> Moreover, he made all that were found in Jerusalem and Benjamin stand with him. The inhabitants of Jerusalem did according to the covenant of God, the God of their fathers. <sup>33</sup> Josiah removed all the abominations from the whole territory of Bnei-Yisrael and made all who were found in Israel to worship ADONAI their God. All his days they did not turn away from following ADONAI, the God of their fathers.

Now that's t'shuvah! In last week's parashat, Moses commanded every seventh year, when all Israelites were gathered for the Shemitah Succot feast, all of the Torah was to be read "in their hearing". Josiah wasted no time personally performing that apparently overdue mitzvot.

By the way, Hilkiyah is clearly identified as the kohen gadol (the high priest) earlier in the chapter. He and the other four men the king entrusted with obtaining The LORD's opinion regarding the scroll were apparently directed by another man, likely a highly revered prophet, to a woman we know very little about. Chuldah is clearly extraordinary in her influence. Some scholars are even persuaded she, not the high priest or that unidentified man, provided authoritative assessment of the scroll's canonical status. It is certainly she who speaks the Word of The LORD into the situation, with no hint of indignation from the men involved, including the king himself, and all she foretold came to pass. There is no questioning her anointing in this matter and note there is a godly king on the scene calling the governmental shots, and respected male prophets are also at hand. Chew on this a while if any of this is new to you.

Perhaps you are thinking I must be ignorant of what Paul said regarding women teaching men in II Timothy 2:11-14 (TLV):

<sup>11</sup> Let a woman receive training in a quiet demeanor with complete respect for order. <sup>12</sup> But I do not allow a woman to train or dictate to a man, but to be in a quiet demeanor. <sup>13</sup> For Adam was formed first, then Eve. <sup>14</sup> Also Adam was not deceived but the woman—being deceived, she fell into transgression.

I assure you I am not ignorant of what Paul said. This drash has now arrived at the crux of one of the great divisions within the Body—complementarianism versus egalitarianism—along with attendant concepts having some gender-based component, such as:

- managing versus consulting,
- the concept of overarching creation order, both before and after The Fall,
- conflating prophecy and teaching,
- prophesying versus judging prophecy,
- functional and behavioral differences; in the world versus in the Body, as well as in a marriage versus in a congregation versus in trans-local ministry versus in business versus in civil government or militia,

- assigning sub-authorities such as authority over budgeting or interior decorating based upon metrics like who has the greater experience or stronger artistic temperament,
- reassigning responsibilities and authorities after the onset of disabilities physical, mental, and/or spiritual,
- grounds for being unsubmitive to authority or even usurping authority, and so on. Kindly note that, for the sake of simplicity and time limitations, contemporary gender confusion was completely ignored in those bullet points.

This drash cannot attempt to settle any of these differences, only acknowledge the complementarian/egalitarian viewpoints overshadow what the Scriptures explicitly tell us about Deborah and Chuldah, not to mention all the other prominent women in The Scriptures.

Here is what this drash intends you to grasp. Along with the Torah, the Heavens, the Earth, and the Song of Moses, these two women, Chuldah and Deborah, also stand as witnesses against most of the descendants of Avraham, Itzchak, and Yaakov. Using impeccable witnesses, of whom there are many more, including non-Jewish Enoch and Job, The LORD has built an air-tight case against those who should know better, the children of Israel.

They are not without an Advocate, hallelujah! But life-changing repentance demonstrated by actions conforming to the Torah remains the core of the only possible defense, alongside maintaining deep conviction that Yeshua is LORD—conviction sufficient to withstand any and all pressures to disavow that belief.

To women whom The LORD has extraordinarily gifted and raised up into responsibilities usually associated with men, I say be strong and courageous, but also, be breath-takingly humble and submissive to those in authority over you. And to men with such responsibilities—you're exemplifying how we're to be humble and submissive to those in authority over us, right?

The next parashat is Chol HaMo'ed which begins with Exodus chapter 33 verse 12 and ends with chapter 34 verse 26.
